WHETHER or not the relations between the Governments of Bussia and Great Butain are less cordial since the conclusion of the Chino-Japanese Treaty of Peace, it is evident that the Russian Press is somewhat more Anglophobe. The Moscow and St. Petersburg journals have lately indulged in thinly veiled threats against Great Britain, and Reuter now informs us that the Novce Vremya has been urging the Russian G vernment not to complete the delimitation of the Pamir boundary until Chinese questions are settled and adds that it must be demonstrated to Great Britain that friendly relations with Russia depend upon mutual concessions. We hardly think that advice, though it is quite possible that they may let it be apparent that they are disappointed at not receiving British support in their ourreion of Japan to compel her to forego the slice of Manchiria she contemplated assimilating. Why is Russia other angry or disappointed? The British Government, true to their policy of avoiding entangling allunces, had never committed themselves to any pledge either as to their arranging the supplementary treaty. Relations policy in Europe or Asia. The French Foreign Minister was certainly ingenious if not ingenuous in his statement in reference to the part played by France in the negotia tions that led to the abandonment of the conquered territory in Manchuria by the Japanese. The exchange of views was backed up by a very obvious display of force, and in the case of the Russian Squadron a distinct menace. The Japanese Government yielded the point with dignity, but neither as the result of conviction nor es an act of free will. There is reason to believe that neither France nor Germany were proud of the part they were induced to play at the beliest of Russia, and they certainly have not as a consequence advanced in the esteem of the Japanese. The appointment which he latterly held was that of the company's chief representative in Chies. As the proprietors are aware, the deed of settlement provides for the appoint. ment of three managing directors, but since the death of Mr. Henry Bayley in 1887, his place has never been filled up, and the arduous duties of the management bave fallen on Sir Thomas Sutherland and Mr. Barnes, who have, how ver, been sesisted by a very able stuff. As the time approaches when the mail contracts will absorb a very special amount of attention, and as the character of the company's business tends every year to become more extensive and complicated, the managing directors have suggested, and the board outirely concur in the opinion, that the third place in the management should now be filled up. Acting, therefore, on the precedents; which have always hitherto guided them in connection with the management-viz, that of promoting a member of the stuff to the bighest executive office, the board now recommends that Mr. Adam Tuit, one of the company's assistant ON BOMRAY.managers, should be promoted to fill this recent !
